Usborne Beginners Giraffes

Everything you need to know about giraffes - and more.

What sounds do giraffes make? How do they bend down to the ground to drink? How tall is a baby giraffe? This book has all the answers and much more, along with photographs, step-by-step illustrations, simple text and links to websites with video clips and activities.

Key Selling Points

- Part of the exciting Usborne Beginners series with over 80 titles.
- Expert advice from David Macdonald (Oxford University's first Professor of Wildlife Conservation).
- Easy reading text.

Tongue tricks

Every giraffe has a very long tongue that it can bend. It's good for picking leaves.

A giraffe wraps its tongue around the branch of a tree.

Then it rips off the leaves and pulls them into its mouth.

Giraffes' tongues have thick skin to protect them from sharp thorns.

Giraffes' tongues can be purple, dark blue or black.

A giraffe also uses its tongue to wash its face.

See how this giraffe is licking its nose clean.

Big babies

A mother giraffe carries her baby inside her for about 15 months. A baby giraffe is called a calf.

When a calf is born, it falls to the ground. The calf isn't hurt.

Then the calf rests while its mother gently licks it clean.

After just one hour, the calf stands up and starts to walk.

This mother is nuzzling her young calf, so they get used to each other's smell.
